

Celebrating 25 Years!

“The Neuroscience of Business . . . Thinking, Learning, and Productivity”

Our March 18th program last night was attended by over 60 members and guests. Rick Jouett, M. S. Ed., with Washington University was the keynote speaker. Mr. Jouett is currently Director of Employment and Career Development with Washington University in St. Louis. Rick leads the Danforth campus employment function, as well as a dynamic training and organizational development group at the university, which provides leadership, management, interpersonal and organizational development programs for university administrators and staff.

Our members and guests experienced a presentation that clearly defined the unique power of our “brains”. The purpose of this self-development program was to teach you how to gain self-awareness of your strongest traits for thinking, learning, and productivity. The presentation provided tools for accelerated professional development, and most importantly, made you realize that learning and development is fun! Mr. Jouett’s presentation can be downloaded from our web site at www.ifmastl.org.

On behalf of the St. Louis Chapter of IFMA, we thank Rick Jouett for sharing his presentation with our group. We also thank Washington University School of Medicine for sponsoring the parking cost for this event.
